Sermon Summary

The Liberating Power of Giving Thanks

By Bryan Hudson, D.Min.

Colossians 1:12, Always thanking the Father. He has enabled you to share in the inheritance that belongs to his people, who live in the light.

1 Thessalonians 5:18, In everything give thanks; for this is the will of God in Christ Jesus for you

Thanksgiving is more than an expression of gratitude. It is a liberating spiritual power that connects us to God's presence, opens our eyes to His provisions, and strengthens us through every season of life.

While the world pursues power, prestige, and control over others, God has given believers a greater power rooted in praise and thanksgiving. This power does not place others in bondage; it brings freedom, clarity, strength, and spiritual confidence.

Colossians 1:12 reminds us that God has already enabled us to share in the inheritance of His people. Giving thanks does not necessarily bring us something new; it opens our eyes to recognize what God has already provided. We must avoid looking for what we already possess in Christ.

First Thessalonians 5:18 instructs believers to give thanks in everything, not necessarily for everything. We do not thank God for sickness, hardship, or suffering, but we can thank Him in the midst of every circumstance, knowing that He remains faithful.

Five Keys to the Liberating Power of Giving Thanks

1. Giving thanks helps us reconnect with our foundation.
Ezra 3:11; Matthew 7:24–25

Jesus Christ is our firm foundation. Just as the Israelites celebrated when the foundation of the temple was laid, thanksgiving reminds us that God's work continues even when we cannot see the finished result. A life established on Christ can withstand the storms of life.

2. Giving thanks helps keep our lives clear of anxiety, worry, and sin traps.
Philippians 4:6; Ephesians 5:1–4

Thanksgiving changes how we approach difficulties. Instead of allowing anxiety, fear, frustration, or complaining to dominate our thoughts, we bring specific requests to God with prayer and thanksgiving. Gratitude also helps illuminate areas of our lives that require correction, encouraging integrity, holiness, and spiritual alertness.

3. Giving thanks is the container that allows us to receive and hold blessings, benefits, and responsibilities.
Colossians 3:14–15

Thanksgiving creates a spiritual capacity to recognize and appreciate what God has provided. It also helps us become more sensitive to His direction and our responsibilities. Gratitude is not only about what we receive from God, but also about recognizing what He has called us to do.

4. Giving thanks positions us to allow God to transform every weakness into strength.
2 Corinthians 12:9–10

The Apostle Paul discovered that God's grace is sufficient and His strength is made perfect in weakness. We do not have to deny difficulties or pretend that problems do not exist. Instead, we acknowledge them and surrender them to God. Through thanksgiving and faith, our weaknesses become opportunities for God to demonstrate His strength.

Paul's declaration, "For when I am weak, then I am strong," is more than a positive confession or motivational statement. It is the reality of God's power working in those who trust Him.

5. Giving thanks draws us closer to God and to covenant relationships.
Psalm 35:18

Thanksgiving strengthens our relationship with God and deepens our appreciation for others. It reminds us that we belong to the body of Christ, both locally and universally. Gratitude also enriches our relationships with family, friends, ministry partners, and others whom God has placed in our lives.

Central Message

The liberating power of thanksgiving is found in recognizing that God has already provided what we need in Christ, and gratitude helps us see, receive, and walk in those provisions.

Thanksgiving redirects our attention from what is wrong to what God is doing. It reconnects us with our foundation, protects our peace, strengthens our faith, increases our capacity for responsibility, and deepens our relationships.

As we enter the Thanksgiving and holiday season, even while remembering loved ones who are no longer with us, we can remain grateful for God's faithfulness and presence.

Closing Takeaway:

"Thanksgiving will carry you through every season."

Regardless of what life brings, we can continue to give thanks because God's grace is sufficient, His strength is available, and His faithfulness never changes.
